Notes:

There was discussion on the community center's request for $100,000 so it could offer free memberships to Wiscasset residents. The Budget Committee opposed because of the possibility of it turning into day care center. Duane Goud said the rules about children being accompanied by parents would still apply. Although there will be increased costs with more people using the facility, those using it might take advantage of other activities offered above and beyond the free membership. Phil DiVece recommended letting the voters decide at the November election when a larger turnout could be expected. Duane Goud and David Nichols favored voting at Town Meeting.

The endowment was discussed. Duane Goud said the endowment is designated in the reserve account as recreation funds which were left over when the building was built. There were questions about uses of the endowment or interest from the endowment and the purpose of establishing an endowment. Pamela Dunning said before any vote is taken, there should be a written policy on how the endowment would be used. Phil DiVece recommended that Todd Souza be invited to answer questions on the matter.

The Budget Committee will meet on April 14 at 6:30. There are six items to be resolved.

Dick Hanson asked about pay raises for Buck Rines, Woody Freeman and Bob Blagden which are not included in the budget. Duane Goud said they would be taken from contingency funds; and there had not been time to meet with the three for negotiations

Arthur Faucher distributed a letter from Attorney Eliot Field who represents the residents and contractor of Borski's Way. The letter requests that acceptance of road be on a warrant article to be voted on at Town Meeting. The Selectmen will decide whether it will appear on the ballot.

The meeting adjourned at 9:30.
